A DEADLY CAREER!

Attracting our people into the teaching profession

MOTIVATE
EDUCATE

Registration now open

This national event is aimed at those responsible in schools, communities or teacher education programs for promoting and marketing teaching opportunities as a career of choice.

The forum is also open to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people close to commencing their teaching career.

Final year teaching graduates are invited to network with potential employers.

Forum themes will include:

- Effective strategies to promote teaching as a career of choice to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander school students, education employees and community advocates.
- Making a successful transition from teacher education to employment.
- Supply and demand: where are the education jobs in the future?
- Teaching in 2020: the changing face of teaching, learning, teaching and ICTs.
- Contribution to national communications strategies and resources to promote teaching.

A Deadly Career! is hosted by MATSITI: Conference convenor is Professor Peter Buckskin, Dean, Indigenous Scholarship, Engagement and Research, University of South Australia.

Conference facilitator is leading educator and acclaimed author Dr Chris Sarra.

Join our mob and make a difference to their future.

This MATSITI forum is designed to engage hearts and minds, to consider teaching as a career of choice for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people - for young people, or for adults considering a career change or to further develop their current education career.

Program

A Deadly Career! will include the following:

- Keynote presentations by leading educators
- Practitioner workshops aligned to key topics and future actions
- Panel debates, marketing 'pitches'
- A recruitment marketplace – employers and employment seekers
- Digital media, webinar and online technologies to promote and support teaching
- Exhibition space and informal poster sessions
- Networking opportunities and conference dinner
- Consultation for a National MATSITI attraction and marketing action plan

MATSITI forum workshops are loosely divided into three main streams:

1. Getting your promotional message across
2. Pathways from study to employment
3. Vision 2020: the changing face of teaching and technology
